

Jennifer Lynn

20h ·

This is being discussed quite a lot in my editors' groups.

WASHINGTONPOST.COM

ChatGPT took their jobs. Now they walk dogs and fix air conditioners.

Meet the people who have already lost their jobs to AI.

 3

8 comments 1 share

 Like

 Comment

 Share

Most relevant ▾

Renée Picard

Sounds like a lot of people are losing writing jobs directly, but of course we are all losing work indirectly as well. I hope that there are some rules / laws put into place, but somehow I doubt that will happen?

Like Reply 20h

Tina Wayland

Welp, I guess there goes my income.

Like Reply 18h

Jennifer Lynn

Tina Wayland I'm thinking about this a lot. And how to teach professional writing, business writing, writing in general in this context. I saw an ad offering to teach people how to 'use and optimize AI for grant writing' - so where does that leave spec... See more

Like Reply 18h

Tina Wayland

Jennifer Lynn Who will we be when the jobs are all automated and we have no income?

Like Reply 18h

Jennifer Lynn

Tina Wayland imo, it will be exacerbating the gap between the super rich and everyone else - eliminating the middle class. I'm not sure why more people aren't seeing this.

Like Reply 18h

Alexander Somma

Jennifer Lynn LLMs tools are here to stay and will only proliferate more. Specialist grant writers will still have a valuable role to play in the context of using and optimizing AI for grant writing. While AI tools can certainly assist with certain asp... See more

Like Reply 1h

Jennifer Lynn

Alexander Somma Yes, yet while not a complete replacement, they will affect job numbers in certain fields, it seems.

Like Reply 38m

Jennifer Lynn 100% agree. Jobs are going to change and they are going to change fast. I've been working with LLMs for years and the sudden public acceptance of them

View 1 more comment

Write a comment...

